Indore: Indian Institute of Management, Indore (IIM-I) organized final round of 'Talent hunt' on Sunday with 10 teams making it to the final round. Pragya Pathak and Rimjhim Mathur, who mesmerized the audience with their Kathak performance were declared the winners.

The initial rounds of the hunt started about two weeks ago wherein the participants were asked to submit their videos. The top ten participants were picked based of their skill and interest of the audience. The videos were extremely diverse and artistic, covering not just established art forms like music and dance forms but also unconventional ones like nail art and magic shows. Each art form covered various genres. The drummers, singers, guitarists and other musicians explored different forms of music, right from the Blues of the Western music to Bollywood. The judges for the event were freelance film maker Piyush Sharma, dramatist and writer Idarak Qureshi and economics professor Siddharth Rastogi.

Winners Pragya Pathak and Rimjhim Mathur performed a Kathak act portraying the eternal saga of Krishna and Meera. "The winners used classical forms of dance to mesmerize the members of the audience," said one of the organizers, Prastish Singh.

IIM INDORE HOLDS SERIES OF EVENTS

On the occasion of Republic Day, a series of events was organised at the Indian Institute of Management Indore.

The celebrations began with hoisting of national flag by IIM Indore Director Prof. Rishikesha T. Krishnan which was followed by his address.

Krishnan said that the Constitution provides the framework for the rule of law and the functioning of democracy which captures the value and philosophy that we follow.

He observed that many people believe that the Constitution was changed many times in the past which is sign of its weakness. However, he added that despite the country had to face many problems and challenges in the past, our Constitution has proved durable and adaptive to the changing times and, therefore, it retains its core structure.

To achieve the dreams of those who wrote the Constitution, let us all pledge that we remain committed to uphold the rule of law, Prof. Krishnan said.

While sharing his views with the student community of IIM Indore, he observed that those who make meaningful contributions to the society are able to create a lasting impact on the minds of people compared to those who advance very rapidly in their career and earn lot of money. This was followed by a group song by students of the Integrated Programme in Management (IPM) and distribution of Computer Proficiency Awards and certificates by the director to the staff members of the Institute. A drawing and painting competition (for children up to 14 years) and a special quiz for the faculty staff and their family members were also organised on the theme - Future of India.

The videos were extremely diverse and artistic, covering not just established art forms like music and dance forms but also unconventional ones like nail art and magic shows etc. IPM media committee member Shilpika Ganerwala said.
