Five Days Workshop of Case Method:
Teaching, Writing & Simulation
Date: January 10-14, 2022

Programme overview: Transformation of the students outlook is the central objective in management and engineering education. Adopting a participant-centred approach is a powerful strategy for transformation. IIM I and HBSP course has been designed to incorporate participants-based experience. Case Study and simulation is a research method involving an up-close, in-depth, and detailed examination of a particular case. Cases are narratives, situations, select data samplings, or statements that present unresolved and provocative issues, situations, or questions (Indiana University Teaching Handbook, 2005). The case method is a participatory, discussion-based way of learning where students gain skills in critical thinking, communication, and group dynamics.

Objectives: The objective of this workshop is to develop a faculty in all the three level of capabilities ranging from Knowledge, skills where in the faculty develops the capabilities for opportunity /problem framing visioning alternatives, analysis critical thinking , cross functional integration and third being capabilities of developing educational attitudes , beliefs and world view. Participative learning through case study and simulations helps developing all the three levels. We will go through a broad framework of integrating Case Creation with applied research in Management and to generate a Concept cascade to enable teachers channel their research experiences into classrooms in better and faster fashion. Using the case method of teaching shall help the participants in developing skills in the above areas and shall close with a project on case development. Preparing to lead the class discussion, leading the class discussion in a manner such that student discovers the theory rather than be informed about it.
